Hope and Enthusiasm

My hope for the SAR

in 2017 and beyond is for this organization to continue to grow and to reach people in our communities about our organization.

To my fellow Compatriots,

As we closed out 2016, all I can say is that 2016 was a year full of excitement and enthusiasm. Our compatriots were ready to hit the pavement running with new ideas, challenges, goals, etc. Our compatriots and wives are the best. With that being said, Cilla and I hope that each of you had a wonderful holiday and a safe New Year celebration. We are full of hope and enthusiasm for 2017. Cilla and I wish the best for each of you and your families for 2017. Cilla and I attended the Great Lakes District meeting on Oct. 28-29, 2016 in Grand Rapids, Michigan. That afternoon, I joined the color guard and other compatriots, wives and guests at the Gerald Ford Library. I spoke to honor our 38th president of the United States of America. President Ford was an SAR member. I had the honor and privilege of laying a wreath at his grave on the grounds of the presidential library. That evening was a wonderful time of fellowship, to meet new compatriots and their wives, and renew old friendships. I had the honor and privilege to present the Gold Good Citizenship medal to U.S. Sen. Gary C. Peters of Michigan. The following day, the Great Lakes District finished its wonderful business meeting. At the meeting, I received pledges from the members of the district for my State Challenge for the Council of Youth Awards. I would like to thank those who made pledges. I spoke on my initiatives and the items and issues going on in the SAR. I encouraged the compatriots to get involved in their chapters and on state and national levels. I encouraged them to grow their chapter, get involved in our youth programs and other programs. Cilla and I attended the Central District meeting on Nov. 4-5. I spoke at the meeting on my initiatives and on other items going on in the SAR. On Nov. 9-10, Cilla and I attended the New Mexico State meeting. It was our first time visiting the state, and it was great to experience a different culture. That evening, I spoke to compatriots and their wives. They made us feel welcome, and they are a wonderful group to be around. We heard from them about their concerns and issues, and I shared with them that all of our societies have similar concerns and issues. We enjoyed sightseeing and experiencing what the state had to offer.

Cilla and I left New Mexico and attended the Arizona State meeting in Phoenix on Nov. 11-12. That afternoon, we attended Veterans Day 2016, the Pebble Creek Salute to our Veterans Program. The AZ Color Guard presented the colors to open the program. I attended the AZ Board of Managers meeting on Nov. 12, talked about my initiatives, and listened to their concerns and issues. That evening, Cilla and I attended the AZ SAR banquet and I brought greetings and remarks. I took part in the Military Veterans Recognition program that evening, assisting in the presentation of a War Service Medal to World War II veteran Vern Kenneth Southworth. It was an honor to be part of the presentation.

Cilla and I attended the Fort Morris event in Georgia on Nov. 19. I spoke at the event about the battle and presented a wreath. That evening, we traveled to Screven County, Georgia for the chartering of a new chapter in the state, the 33rd for Georgia. The new chapter is Brier Creek. This was the site of a Revolutionary War battle, where the Tories defeated the Patriots. It was an important battle, as the tide of a major battle in Georgia was turning in favor of the Patriots. We are glad that we have a chapter in this location. That evening, I swore in the chapter officers and the new president. I presented a Meritorious Service medal to Dess Smith, who was instrumental in the formation of the chapter.

Cilla and I attended and took part in our first Liberty Tree event hosted by the Caloosa SAR Chapter of Fort Myers, Florida. We attended the Great Bridge event in Norfolk, Virginia, on Dec. 3. I would like to thank Sam Powell for flying us to this event. I talked about the importance of this battle and presented a wreath in honor of those who fought there. We attended the luncheon hosted by the VA SAR Society. That afternoon, Sam flew us to Delaware, where we attended our first Ratification Day event. That evening, I spoke about Ratification Day and enjoyed dining with the compatriots and wives from the Delaware Society. This was a wonderful event to attend.

On Dec. 8, 2016, Cilla and I, along with PG (2014-15) Lindsey Brock, traveled to the National SAR Headquarters and took the staff out for their Christmas Luncheon. I spoke to the staff and thanked them for all they do for us. It was a great time of fellowship and good food. I had a visit with our future newest member, Rae Ann Sauer's newborn son. I look forward to him becoming a junior member in the SAR. We will put him to work as soon as we can.

On Dec. 10, Cilla and I took part in the Christmas parade in Cocoa Beach, Florida, with a few members of the Brevard SAR Chapter. As we walked the parade route in our Colonial attire, well-wishers and many children greeted us. What a great time to be out in public honoring our Patriot ancestors. Thank you to the Brevard Chapter for inviting us great time touring Baltimore and the surrounding community, and staying at Turf Valley in Ellicott City. We visited Fort McHenry and the home of the Star Spangled Banner Flag House on the afternoon of the 16th. On the evening of the 17th, I enjoyed meeting the debutantes that were presented. I brought greetings from the National Society and thanked all in attendance for their support and warm wishes. This was a wonderful event. It was great to meet so many new people and catch up with some old friends.

On Dec. 16, we flew to Maryland to attend the Patriot's Ball, hosted by the Maryland SAR on Dec. 17. We had a Continued on page 5

My hope for the SAR in 2017 and beyond is for this organization to continue to grow and to reach people in our communities about our organization. My hope is that our Educational Outreach Programs continue to touch many across this nation and to tell our story. We must continue to let people know why we are relevant and important to this great nation. Our Educational Team has started receiving information from those who have taken the Youth Protection course offered by the Boy Scouts. Thank you for taking this step to protect our youth and society. I also hope that our Youth Awards continue to grow so that we may continue to help these students monetarily. I have continued to receive word that more state societies are sending in their donations to my challenge. Thank you for supporting this worthy project. My hope is that it will continue.

The Mentor Program continues to gain ground and grow nationwide, according to the membership chairman. More and more chapters are assigning mentors to our new members so that we can grow our society. We must never quit mentoring our compatriots no matter how long they have been a member.

May God bless our troops, wherever they are serving, and their families. Please take the time to thank a veteran. no matter when they served. May God continue to bless the United States of America. May God bless each of you and your families.

Yours in Patriotic Service,

Michel Tomme Se

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dear Sir/Madam,

As a recently inducted member of the SAR, I thank you for putting out a fine magazine. I always enjoy reading each issue (cover to cover) and always learn something new, especially those articles concerning information of a historical nature. I also commend you in reaching out to our congressional members, and other notable personalities.

However, I am somewhat taken aback by two of the questions asked of Sen. Mitch McConnell: to wit those questions concerning the greatest challenges facing our country and what his constituents are most concerned about. Those were obviously leading questions that your interviewer should have known, or did know what the responses would focus upon.

If SAR wants to be "fair and balanced" to coin a popular expression, the SAR needs to consider providing an alternative viewpoint to the senator's responses. Questions and responses such as these continue to perpetuate the political divide that is afflicting this great nation. Is that the road the SAR wants to travel?

It matters not to me if you interview a hardcore conservative, or a far-left liberal ... I don't believe those types of questions and responses are a good fit for The SAR Magazine.

I enjoy reading The SAR Magazine, and similar history-based publications, specifically because they do not delve into partisan politics. There are numerous outlets for political discourse if that is what I am seeking. I believe those two questions marred an otherwise fine and enlightening article. On the very positive side, I learned a side of Sen. McConnell that I never knew, or would never know about, if not for The SAR Magazine ... and I especially applaud his response to the question concerning the limited amount of education in our public schools about the American Revolution.

If deemed necessary to ask politicians questions that will clearly lead to a partisan response in the future, and I realize he is the senator from your state, fine; however, I respectfully ask that you first consider what value those questions and responses add to the article.

I ask that you do what you do best ... remembering and honoring our Patriot ancestors, and educating our future generations as to those Patriots' sacrifice ... and keep the politics out of it ... or at least keep it neutral.

I thank you for your time and consideration in this request!

Respectfully, Stephen Clark, Hartford County Chapter, Connecticut SAR

It was with great chagrin and even greater disgust that I read a portion of the Fall 2016 SAR Magazine. In particular, I am completely and totally appalled that the published interview with Sen. Mitch McConnell asked at least two questions that allowed Sen. McConnell to espouse a completely, and totally, political response. I am completely and totally appalled that the magazine would publish answers that provided Sen. McConnell a forum for his partisan political policies and beliefs. I will add that I would be equally appalled if the magazine allowed, for example, former President (and SAR member) Jimmy Carter to espouse his diametrically opposed political policies and beliefs.

I believe The SAR Magazine, in its next issue, should publish an apology to SAR members for allowing the current issue to degenerate into a partisan political forum, and should specifically disavow the statements by Sen. McConnell as being inappropriate for inclusion in the magazine.

Respectfully submitted, Dennis E. Lee, Brevard Chapter, Florida SAR

SAR Silver Color Guard Medal Recipient

By Mark C. Anthony, Former South Carolina SAR President

The anniversary celebration of the Battle of Kings Mountain on Oct 1, 2013 was unique for a number of reasons, but the most significant event was the presentation of the SAR Silver Color Guard Medal to Compatriot Will Flint of the South Carolina SAR. What made this unique was that Compatriot Flint was just 14 years old at the time he was presented the medal. He thus became the youngest-known Compatriot to receive this award having been a member nearly six years and an active member of the color guard for five years.

Compatriot Flint also is an active member of the Children of the American Revolution. He has held many local and state offices, including serving as the South Carolina C.A.R. State President during the 2015-16 year.

During his tenure in the C.A.R., Flint has been mentored by many SAR members and has always been treated as an equal in all color guard activities.

The anniversary celebration was held at the Capri Theatre in Gaffney, S.C., attracting nearly 200 attendees.

As the ceremony started, Flint was called forward to receive his medal, which was presented to him by then-National Color Guard Commander (now-President General) Mike Tomme and President General (2013-2014) Joe Dooley. Both commented on their pride in watching Flint grow as a member of the color guard. The presentation was followed by a rousing round of applause.

Compatriot Will Flint, right, accepted the SAR Silver Color Guard Medal from Compatriot Dan Woodruff.

A recurring theme through the presidencies of President General Thomas Lawrence and President General J. Michael Tomme Sr. is a strong emphasis on the Youth Awards, with the creation of the Council of Youth Awards by PG Lawrence and the challenge by PG Tomme to obtain better funding for the awards. This recognizes that one of our most important functions is to transmit the values and ideals of our founding fathers to our youth, and our Youth Awards are our primary means of doing this.

The Council of Youth Awards Initiative continues to demonstrate the value SAR members place on Youth Award Contests. Contributors to this initiative now include 10 state societies representing a current fund balance of almost $15,000. The Florida Society ($4,100), Kansas Society ($2,250) and the Michigan Society ($1,750) currently lead in contributions. Societies of Arizona, Georgia, Germany, Illinois, New Jersey, Pennsylvania,\ and Texas have also responded to President General Tomme's emphasis on increasing monetary awards to winning applicants.

Across all grade levels, state societies encourage American youths to showcase their talents through patriotic themes. In July PG Tomme called upon the state societies to donate a minimum of $1,000 to the Council of Youth Awards prior to June 1, 2017. If all state societies meet this challenge, PG Tomme and First Lady Cilla will donate an additional $10,000 to the Council for Youth Awards. All state society donations of $1,000 or more will be recognized at the Knoxville Congress and awarded a flag streamer.

While ongoing support for SAR Youth Award Programs is vigorously encouraged, these President General Initiative funds as of June 1, 2017 will be divided among the award contests. Tomme has directed the Council of Youth Awards to review the youth award contests and determine how best to appropriate these new funds across all established programs.

State societies interested in donating to the Council of Youth Awards are asked to make their checks payable to the SAR and indicate on the notation line "Council of Youth Awards Initiative."

Erecting a Flagpole to Honor a Friend

By Marion Hersey, Flag Chairman, John Paul Jones Chapter WA SAR

n July 7, 2016, I was contacted by Lori Raymaker, the volunteer coordinator of the Kitsap Parks Department. She informed me that there was a future Eagle Scout who wanted assistance with moving and installing the flagpole at Veteran's Memorial Park in Port Orchard in honor of a neighbor who had been killed in an accident.

Of course, I was interested as I had restored and painted the guns with the assistance of sailors from the USS Stennis two years ago and it was my goal to bring the pole here.

For the last six months, Daniel King, his mother and grandfather had been working on the project along with about 15-20 of his family and friends. They ensured the pole was refurbished, hole was dug and sleeve cemented in to allow for raising the flag.

On Jan. 15, the flagpole was raised, set in sleeve, and a flag was raised.

As flag chairman of the John Paul Jones Chapter WASSAR, I surprised him with the presentation of the first flag and a flag certificate honoring him for doing this project.

Respect for our veterans' memorials is again shown, this time as a 17-year-old's Eagle Scout Project.

C.A.R. Participation

t our last leadership meeting in Louisville, Kentucky, I attended the Children of the American Revolution Committee meeting. Conversation focused on how we could encourage C.A.R. members to transfer into the Sons of the American Revolution. I stated that if we wanted more transfers into the SAR we need to show the young men that they are welcome in our organization. I was challenged to write an article on ways to achieve this. I asked several societies to send me ideas on how they were already including the C.A.R. in their societies' activities. Thanks to California and Indiana for their ideas. I think, though, the question is not just how we can get the C.A.R. involved in the SAR, but how we can encourage all our male youth to become involved as well as how we can become involved with them. We want to encourage the C.A.R. youth to transfer to the SAR and to retain the youth memberships that we have created in the SAR.

Some ideas that were sent to me include inviting the youth to be involved in our color guard parades, grave markings and naturalization ceremonies. Every boy enjoys dressing up in a uniform and it is even better when he can dress up like one of his ancestrors. All our societies have included the C.A.R. officers in their programs at wreathlaying ceremonies and state meetings. But what have we had them do at those meetings? Our Ohio SAR meeting has had the state president of the C.A.R. attend the meeting to have a meal, give a greeting and receive medals of service to the past president and a donation to the state president's project.

Now let's take a look outside the box at ideas that can be used by national, state and chapter levels. On the state level, at your next state meeting, ask a youth or C.A.R member to lead the Pledge of Allegiance, and have the C.A.R. state president present his state and national projects, and offer the items they are selling to raise funds. This can also be done on the district level. Although this would be an expense on the C.A.R. budget, it may be worth it to them to promote their projects. Or perhaps SAR members could volunteer to set up the C.A.R project displays and man them.

Each C.A.R. chapter chooses a learning project packet having to do with, for example, American heritage or Native American history. They develop these projects and compete on the state, district and national levels. Why not have SAR members volunteer to serve as chairmen for these projects? I know of some good teachers in our society that would make great chairmen and I know that C.A.R is always looking for adults to be involved in chairing these projects. The C.A.R. could also be invited to attend chapter meetings of the SAR and talk about their chapter projects, and promote their state and national projects. This would make a great program for SAR chapter meetings.

On the SAR side we have our youth competitions such as poster, speech, essay contest, flag award, law enforcement award, etc. Why not ask a C.A.R. or youth member to be on the selection committee in your chapter as a new voice? They can also be present at the presentation of these certificates. News media loves to get articles of youth participating in any good project, so why not make it one that helps both youth and SAR with publicity?

At state and Congress meetings, senior male youth could serve as pages. DAR has done this for years. Here, too, is a good opportunity to allow them to be in our color guard.

At high school graduation ceremonies, C.A.R and youth members could be recognized with the Good Citizenship medal or the C.A.R Bronze Medal. This would promote good will with the schools because it would promote good students, and promote a good relationship with our C.A.R and youth members as they would be recognized in front of their peers. It would also let the students in the local schools know that there is an organization that appreciates them.

If we can do some of these things, it would help both C.A.R. and SAR to begin to work together for a stronger, more vibrant program that I am sure would encourage growth in both organizations.

SAR Genealogical Research Library Databases, Accessing and Links

The Library's Catalog is always available online at library.sar.org and there are 15 useful "Links to Other Historical and Genealogical Libraries and Online Resources" on the Library's main webpage. Also, many quality library databases have been available in-house for members and visitors to our library for quite some time. These include Ancestry, Fold3, Heritage Quest and the New England Genealogical Society (AmericanAncestors.org). Because of proprietary rights, we can't offer access to these outside the library. However, it has been the goal of the library staff, the national library committee and me, as Librarian General, to step up membership services by providing access to services to all members of the SAR from anywhere.

In November 2015, we announced the availability of two genealogical and Revolutionary War databases that can be accessed on the library website:

- "Gale Genealogy Connect" is a first-quality eBook collection consisting of 189 individual titles of online genealogical research on how-to materials and original sources.
- "Sources in American History OnLine: The American Revolution" contains nearly 500 primary source documents exploring the American Revolution, featuring personal accounts, maps, pamphlets and monographs.

To access the two databases, log in on the sar.org website and then go to the library site. Scroll down and on the left column you'll see "Library Databases." Links to the two databases are listed; don't forget them when you are doing your research! Remember you must be logged in to see them.

Another asset available online is the "Family History Files," a collection of 862 digitized files, totaling 36,000 pages, of miscellaneous genealogical information alphabetized by surname. The types of information include family association newsletters, pedigree charts, biographies, Bible records, and much more, all of which were donated to the library over many years. The information in them does not constitute "proof" documentation, but may be useful to you.

To access the "Family History Files," log in your ShareFile account at nssar.sharefile.com. Click on Shared Folders – Members – SAR Genealogical Research Library – then on the Family History Files folder. From there, you may click on Index file to determine if a surname is listed (the Index is not hyperlinked) or click on the relevant letter. The file may then be downloaded or opened.

Want to access more resources? Check out the SAR Library Sons of the American Revolution Facebook page, where we have more than 100 postings of links to both free and subscription genealogy sites, databases, compiled records, etc. Many are unique, hard-to-find digital resources that may be of value to you in your research.

The National Society maintains a genealogical research library because it benefits members, staff and other users, and acts as a vital repository of family information and material. You are invited to contribute books relating to genealogy and the Colonial, Revolutionary War and Founding periods. Do you have a family history book that you or a family member has compiled? Such a book is a perfect addition to the collection, ensuring your family's legacy is known and available to future generations.

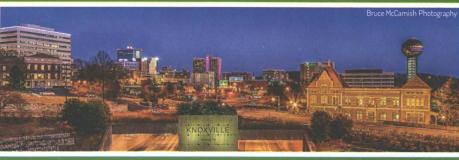

The library depends on your generosity and your membership in the Friends of the library is vital to help fund items needed for the library. If you're unable to visit the library and want to see what it looks like, view the Library FOL Video on the main page of the library website.

Thank you for your support of the library.

This first battle significantly weakened Burgoyne's army and contributed to his near total defeat at the hands of General Horatio Gates in the second battle of Saratoga, the Battle of Bemis Heights, on Oct. 7, 1777. Burgoyne, outnumbered 3 to 1, surrendered his army on Oct. 17, 1777. He would never reach Albany. But the SAR WILL reach Albany, and we will celebrate the victory at Saratoga in style!

CHARLES JAMES FOX: INCIDENTAL PATRIOT?

By Henry J. Voegtle, Chancellor, Texas Society SAR

inston Churchill is reputed to have said that "history is written by the victors" and the history of the American Revolution is no exception. From a distinctly American point of view, we learn of events from the Stamp Act, the Boston Massacre and John Adams' defense of the British soldiers involved, Washington at Valley Forge, and the assistance of the French and Spanish in securing independence. Sometime during our education, the point seems to be made that Americans were a group of upstarts taking on the greatest power at the time. It makes one wonder whether there was any support for the American cause in the mother country?

"... He has cost a whole continent." In 1775, Charles James Fox spoke these words on the floor of the House of Commons, A member of parliament, a Whig and outspoken critic of Lord North's government, the question remains: Was Fox a supporter of American independence? Could he, from the point of view of the Sons of the American Revolution, be considered a patriot?

Scion of a minor noble family, Fox today is known as much for his lifestyle as for his political views. Yet his actions during and immediately after the American Revolution and his relationships with its leading lights seem to indicate a bent toward the cause of independence. It is known that during the Revolution he corresponded with Benjamin Franklin and John Adams. The question is: Did he actively support American independence or was it merely a political decision he made?

Born Jan. 24, 1749, Fox was the second surviving son of Henry Fox, First Baron Holland. Befitting his family's position, Fox attended Eton and began his studies at Herewith College of Oxford University in 1764. Fox left college in 1766 to travel to the continent with his parents, two brothers and sister-in-law.¹

Upon his return from the continent, Fox entered Georgian politics. In 1768, when he was 19, Fox's family ties enabled him to easily acquire a seat in the House of Commons as a Whig. As befitting his connections, he moved quickly into the upper strata of the House of Commons. However, as quickly as he rose, he became estranged from the party leadership. In January 1770, the leadership of the House of Commons had passed from the Chathamite faction of the Whigs, led first by William Pitt the Elder and then by Augustus Grafton, to the so-called Tory² government under North. At this time Fox began taking positions at odds with the leadership of both his party and parliamentary leadership. Nevertheless, he received two ministerial appointments. Fox's first appointment was to the Board of Admiralty in 1770 and he served in that position until he had a falling out with North.³ In 1773, Fox was named to the Board of the Treasury. 4 Both of these would have been rather unusual appointments for a junior member of Parliament were in not for Fox's family ties. Apparently Fox did not take these appointments seriouslywhat was perceived as a cavalier attitude to these appointments was noted

By 1774 Fox came under the influence of Edmund Burke, leader of the Rockingham faction of Whigs. This marked his split from the mainstream Whigs under the elder Pitt.

Fox's younger brother, Henry, had chosen a military career and was sent as a lieutenant to Boston with the 38th Regiment of Foot. In spite of this, Fox was vocal concerning the North government's conduct of American affairs. Fox's criticisms of the American Revolution dealt with both the origins of the war and its conduct. The quote in which he opines that North's actions have cost a continent was made in response to the Intolerable Acts.⁵

As the British efforts to quell the American Revolution progressed, North introduced a bill on Feb. 6, 1777, authorizing the government to "secure or detain Persons charged with, or suspected of, the Crime of High Treason, committed in North America, or on the High Seas, or the Crime of Piracy." The contents of this bill included the suspension of habeas corpus. Addressing this bill on its second reading, Fox was vehement in his opposition to it. His fear was not that it would further incite the Colonies, but that its application could be extended to the British Isles. The bill, in Fox's opinion, had two great faults. The first was the authority of the crown to arrest an individual on mere suspicion of engaging in an action that could be perceived as aiding and abetting the "American rebels." The other odious aspect of the bill was that it would abrogate the right to habeas corpus. In criticizing the bill Fox stated, > Suppose, for instance that I had an old school-fellow, or an intimate companion: I should most probably kept up a correspondence; and, when writing to him, should have told him, 'that the Whigs, and those that were friends to the Revolution, were looked upon now as factious persons; for these are the times that large strides are taken, not only to destroy the liberties of America, but of this country likewise." Would such a paragraph as this furnish a good ground for suspicion? 6

The bill passed the House of Commons on the second reading 196-43.⁷ In his opposition, it appears that Fox thought less of the the bill's effect on America, and more that it would be a pernicious threat to civil liberties in England.

Fox's anti-war position was sharpened by his proposal that "no more of the Old Corps⁸ be sent out of the kingdom." In making this proposal, which was defeated, Fox recited the history of the British missteps, both by the government and on the battlefield. His point, perhaps lost on his fellow members of Commons, was that the Revolution was, up to that point, a series of political blunders by the government and military errors. Was Fox able to see that war was becoming a hopeless cause for the crown? Another of Fox's actions suggests that he might have thought so.

In April 1778, Thomas Powys proposed enlarging the powers of the peace commissioners, which at that time consisted of Lord Howe and his brother, General Howe: Frederick Howard, the Earl of Carlisle; William Eden; and George Johnstone, in their dealings with the Americans. Powys' resolution was to permit the commissioners to have the authority to "declare the Americans absolutely and for ever [sic] independent." Fox's remarks favored the recognition of American "independency," as he phrased it. There was clearly an ulterior motive to recognition of independence. Fox noted that the relationship between France and America was substantial, with a commercial treaty and recognition of American independence by the French, and that there was the possibility of Spanish involvement in the Revolution. He also noted that the cost of the war was increasing and that "the dependency of America as a matter of very little moment to any part of this country, other than the Minister and his dependents." Besides the immediate economic and military consequences, Fox saw that the recognition of independence could bolster trade between Britain and America, and that Britain "should probably secure a larger share of the commerce of the Americans. . . ."¹² He also speculated that American independency would [not] so soon rise . . . to maritime pre-eminence. The Americans could have not inducement to hunt for territory abroad, when what they quietly possessed would be more than they could occupy and cultivate. They would find the advantages of conquest unequal to those of agriculture; and remembering that man had naturally a predilection for the enjoyment of landed property, they would find it impossible, in a country where land was to be had for nothing, to propagate a spirit of manufacture was to be had for nothing, to propagate a spirit of manufacture and commerce. Every American, more or less, would become the tiller and planter, and the country might, in some future and distant period, be the Arcadia, but it could never be the Britain of the world. ¹³

As with other endeavors that Fox supported, this bill also died in the House of Commons, in this case with the proposal being ingloriously tabled. However it seems that Fox was moving from tweaking the government toward full support of American independence.

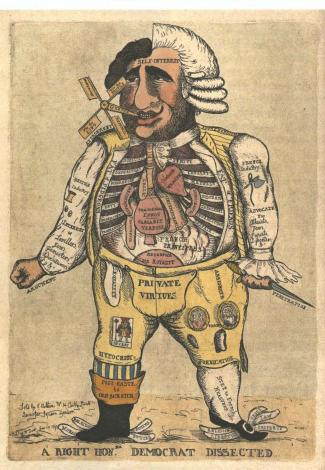

As the war continued, Fox continued his opposition to North's conduct of the war. He supported opposition responses to government speeches and made some himself. He attacked members of the government even to the point of proposing the removal of the Earl of Sandwich as First Lord of the Admiralty in 1779. However, Fox's political fortunes were changing as North's power waned.

In May 1781 Fox responded to David Hartley's¹⁵ bill to restore peace with America. As with his earlier undertakings, Fox's comments concerning the bill appear to indicate a deep understanding of the dichotomy that existed about conflict between Britain and the United States.¹⁶

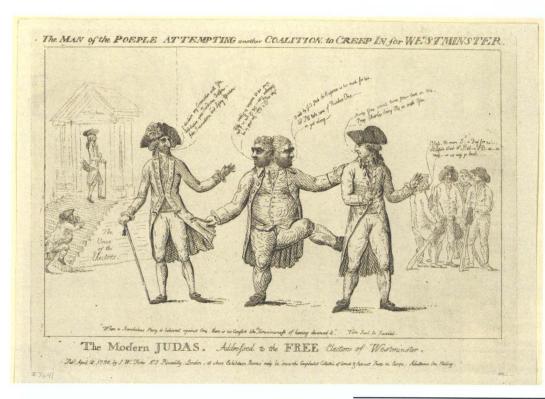

When Lord North finally resigned as prime minister in 1782, Fox became the foreign secretary in the Charles Watson-Wentworth, the Second Marquess of Rockingham's administration. This government was short-lived, lasting only 14 weeks, but was notable for Rockingham's acknowledgement of American independence. Following Rockingham's death on July 1, 1782, Fox left the government, refusing to serve in Shelburne's administration. Eventually he formed a coalition with Lord North that came to power on April 2, 1783. Fox again became foreign secretary. During Fox's second tenure as foreign secretary the Treaty of Paris was concluded and American independence recognized.

A British satirical drawing in which Charles James Fox, depicted with two faces, seeks the support of a former enemy, Sir Samuel Hood, while repudiating a former friend, Lord John Townshend.

It appeared to outside observers that Fox was less than supportive of the absolute recognition of independence. Writing to David Hartley in September 1783, ¹⁷ Benjamin Franklin urged him to counsel Fox about his "mistaken notions of the American people." Franklin continued,

You have deceived yourselves too long with vain expectations of reaping advantage from our little discontents. We are more thoroughly an enlightened people, with respect to our political interests, than perhaps any other under heaven. Every man among us reads, and is so easy in his circumstances as to have leisure for conversations of improvement, and for acquiring information. Our domestic misunderstandings, when we have them, are of small extent, though monstrously magnified by your microscopic newspapers. ¹⁸

Such a rebuke could have had the effect of sabotaging the ratification of the treaty had it not been concluded, yet it would appear from Franklin's underscoring the journey from the Declaration of Independence through the Treaty of Paris, that the United States are "free sovereign and independent States" was intended to quiet any residual thought of American dependency on Britain. Franklin's opinion that Fox or other English politicians might still harbor the idea that the states might seek to reunite with the mother country or might be retaken, emphasizes that he was suspicious that Fox harbored some concept that might, if not eventually restore British sovereignty of the Americas, allow Britain to exercise significant control over the American economy.

Fox's view of the American Revolution must be filtered through his political leanings. It is difficult to ascertain whether as an opponent of North he was motivated by political animus or by his liberal leanings. Nonetheless, as member of Parliament, Fox was able to express opinions that were likely to be seen as anti-government, if not outright treasonous. But the mercantilist policies of the 18th century clearly colored his opinion about an independent America. Taking all of that into account, Fox might best be seen as a fair-weather supporter of American independence, or perhaps an incidental patriot.

Revolutionary Patriots and the War of 1812:

A Family's Wars

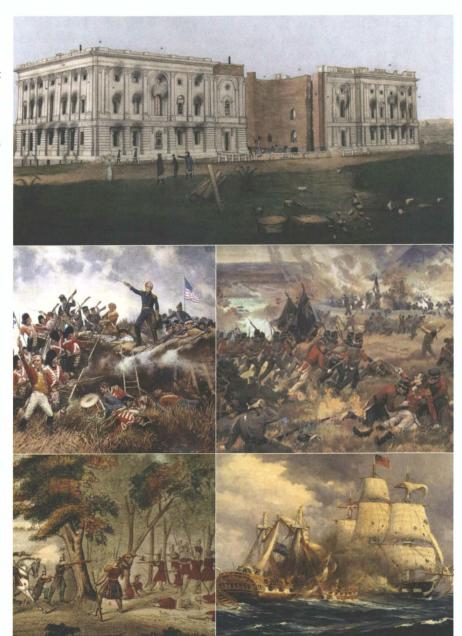

By Rebecca Whitman Koford, CG

The American Revolution set our country on the path to independence, but not without its trials and complications along the way. One of the first tests of that Great American Experiment came during the War of 1812. Would only 28 years of autonomy be enough to meet the challenge to spar with the British again? Thankfully, yes. The best stories of bravery come from our own families with men who served in both wars—fathers and sons, grandfathers and grandsons, and in some rare cases, men who volunteered for both wars.

As we work to prove our own relationship to those great American Patriots of the Revolutionary War, we invariably must work through the War of 1812 generation. The pension records of these "Second Revolution" Patriots can give us clues into the American Revolution generation. Chapter registrars and genealogists who struggle to help new applicants are thrilled that The War of 1812 pension records are being made available online for free now at http://go.fold3. com/1812pensions, thanks to generous contributions from the public. Pension records from both wars offer superb glimpses into the lives and struggles of our ancestors. Service dates, marriage records, women's maiden names, Bible records, and battle descriptions are genealogical gems found among their varied pages.

A moving illustration of patriotism for both wars is a widow's claim for the service of Joseph Gillespie, who served for three years as a fifer under Col. John Lamb's Regiment of Artillery, New York (also listed as the Second Continental Artillery). At the beginning of the War of 1812, the Gillespie family lived on land awarded him from his Revolutionary service. He volunteered again for the "last war with Great Britain" as a matross (artillery gunner's assistant). His captain wanted to refuse Gillespie's service as he was "quite old & would be of little service to me" but was overruled by his commanding officer. Capt. Ingersoll said that despite his misgivings, in the heat of battle Gillespie "did Service & duty as a Soldier as well as the other Soldiers." Tragically, Joseph Gillespie was killed at the Battle of Lewiston in the summer of 1813, leaving his widow and minor children.

Another example of the link between Patriots of both wars, and one that is unique, comes from the War of 1812 widow's pension of Nancy Whitman for her husband Joseph Whitman's service in the New York Militia under Captain Lewis Torrance. Not only does the file contain her marriage information and maiden name, but she names her father and his military service as well. Her plea for assistance reads:

Dec 21st 1879 ... She was the daughter of Captain Shubill Sumner who was a soldier of the old revolutionary war and also a soldier or officer in the war of 1812. She had a brother also who took an active part in that war, and she says her husband was one of the first volunteers ... Mrs. Whitman is 76 years of age and is an invalid ... ²

A deposition in the Revolutionary War pension application for her father "Shubel" Sumner taken in 1821 helps to complete more information on the family.

... he served in the Revolutionary War as follows in Captain Sanfords Company in Colonel B. Bradleys Regiment, Connecticut line ... his family consists of himself his wife Lucy aged above 53 years ... his son William aged 21 in June next ... his Daughter Nancy aged 18 ... his Daughter Laury aged 14 ... his Daughter Mary aged 13 ... 3

Having served as a private on the Connecticut Line, he was in the next conflict promoted to Captain and led his own company as part of Sanford's Unregimented Battalion, New York Militia, in the War of 1812.⁴ Using records from both wars brought new insights into the depth of this family's patriotism and devotion to country, and helped to connect the generations.

With the words, "O, Say Can You See," Francis Scott Key distilled the public sentiment into what is now our national anthem, to forever remind us of the "land of the free and home of the brave." Despite some misgivings, Key volunteered to serve in the War of 1812, but many do not know that he was also the son of a Revolutionary Patriot. His father, John Ross Key, served as a commissioned officer in the Continental Army. Fathers and sons, Patriots all. As we recognize and honor our Revolutionary War ancestors, let us also look for those of their sons (and daughters!) whose lives hung in the balance less than 30 years later, especially to help research some of our ancestral lines that are difficult to prove. The stories of the War of 1812 are the accounts of the strength inherited by the next generation and the ideals of independence instilled in them by those who fought first.

The Sage of Montpelier:

Torchbearer of the American Republic

By Matthew Penza, past winner of the Knight Essay Contest

Besides constructing and arguing for the

influence has extended into the very philosophy of government, particularly regarding the separation of powers and checks

and balances.

n a time of political upheaval and revolution, the framers of the new American republic held unprecedented power to shape the character of the nation for centuries to come. Among these titans, James Madison perhaps stands tallest. Even more so than his presidency, Madison's greatest moment was in the drafting of the new national charter. Hailed as the Father of the Constitution, Madison took up the reins of the Convention, leading the creation of the framework that would resist tyranny longer than any previous civilization. Appreciating the need for popular consent to legitimize the new government, he collaborated with Alexander Hamilton and John Jay on the explicative series The Federalist. As a Representative in the new Congress, he immediately introduced 16 amendments—of which 10 ultimately became our Bill of Rights—to relieve antifederalists' fears of government overreach. Although the Constitution was not and even today is not perfect, its architect thoroughly deserves recognition as a giant of American history.

Little is more fundamental to the American character than our form and philosophy of government. Since the outset of English colonization in America, we have cherished the institutions of republican government. Having known the blessings of self-governance for the nearly 150 years of Salutary Neglect, it would be natural for the statesmen of the new nation to create a government rooted in the people to replace the imperious English monarchy. Enter Madison, former Continental Congressman. Virginia Plan, which became the basic framework for merely "an outline of proposals and concepts" (Stewart of the Convention from amending the Articles of Confederation to writing a completely new charter.

His influence did not end with the Plan. As William Pierce, delegate from Georgia, wrote, "In the management of every great question he evidently took the lead" (529). Moreover, while in the Continental Congress, he had suggested a compromise that, while failing to pass as an amendment to the Articles, provided the basis for the vital Three-Fifths Compromise that became Article II, Section 1 of the Constitution (Davis 241). This section provided that state population, "including those bound to Service for a Term of Years, and excluding Indians not taxed, and three-fifths of all other persons," would determine Congressional representation and taxation. Though this particular compromise became obsolete with the Civil War Amendments, it was crucial in mollifying the South throughout the Antebellum Period, primarily by guaranteeing a proportion of House representation comparatively high for their free populations. Without this compromise, the Convention likely would have foundered.

Once the Convention ended, the challenge of ratification remained. Although only nine states needed to ratify the Constitution, it would only take effect "between the States ratifying the same" (U.S. Const. art. VII). New York, whose legislature was highly critical of the new Constitution, would be especially difficult to sway. Primarily in an attempt to persuade New York, Madison collaborated with Hamilton and Jay on The Federalist, defending the Constitution against antifederalist arguments. After heated, prolonged debate, it seems The Federalist worked; New York ratified in July 1788, renewing hope of success.

Besides helping sway New York, The Federalist has become the source in efforts to assess the Framers' intent. Among Madison's contributions to this series, two stand out. Federalist 62 discussed the "mischievous effects of a mutable government" with constantly changing, convoluted laws and the way in which it "poisons the blessing of liberty itself" (381) to leave the size and scope of government unchecked. He argues convincingly that "It will be of little avail to the people that the laws are made by men of their own choice if the laws be so voluminous that they cannot be read. or so incoherent that they cannot be understood" (381). To Madison, the remedy was obvious and "unnecessary to dilate" (377). The original method for selecting Senators appointment by state legislatures—bore the "advantage of ... giving to the State governments such an agency in the formation of the federal government as must secure the authority of the former" (377). It was nothing short of a safeguard against the inevitable attempts of the federal government to dominate the states. Though removed in 1913, when the Seventeenth Amendment dictated that the Senators of each state would be "elected by the people thereof," this important provision helped maintain the states' power in the interim.

Especially striking is Federalist 10. This discussion of factions contended that, in a republic, interest groups necessarily emerge, and that to eliminate factions either liberty or diversity of interests must themselves be eliminated. The first is impossible because "Liberty is to faction what air is to fire" and "is essential to political life" (78). The second is impractical, since "As long as the reason of man continues fallible, and he is at liberty to exercise it, different opinions will be formed" (78). Resting on his proof that "the causes of faction cannot be removed," Madison shifted his discussion to "controlling its effects" (80). He asserted that the size of the republic would prevent, "by regular vote," minority factions from seizing power (80). Conversely, majority factions must be rendered unable to "concert and carry into effect schemes of oppression" by sufficient opposition (81). Unfortunately, the latter assumption proved mistaken as early as Washington's second term, with the creation of the Democratic-Republican and Federalist parties, a system that persists even today.

Besides constructing and arguing for the Constitution, Madison's influence has extended into the very philosophy of government, particularly regarding the separation of powers and checks and balances. Nearly 140 years after his involvement in the Midnight Appointments and Marbury v. Madison, a nearly identical situation developed around the court-packing scheme. While the legal mechanisms and technical reasoning varied greatly between the two—the former ending with a Supreme Court decision, the latter with a Senate vote—the outcome was identical. Both saw the curbing of a president's attempt to dominate the federal court system in an act the Supreme Court termed "repugnant to the Constitution" (Marshall 83), reaffirming and enforcing the separation of powers. The underlying philosophy reflects perfectly America's refusal to allow "all the powers of government" to concentrate "in the same hands" (Federalist 48 313)—recalling that in 1937 Roosevelt already held strong Democratic control of Congress and, of course, the executive branch—which was "precisely" Madison's "definition of a despotic government" (Federalist 47 310-311).

The impact James Madison had on American history is indeed unparalleled. Few others have had such a tremendous hand in shaping the form of our government or its political philosophy. None can claim to have had afterward a more profound role in explaining them—while Hamilton penned a greater share of The Federalist, it is Madison's contributions that are most oft-cited. Conceivably his greatest accomplishment is the direct impact his philosophies have played in politics, which by Americans' political nature merge directly with daily life. The court-packing incidents serve as merely one illustration from a vast sea of events. America as we know her would not exist but for the genius that was James Madison.

The Men Who Lost America

SAR Visiting Professor speaks at King's College London

By Michael J. Elston, President, Virginia Sons of the American Revolution

Indrew Jackson O'Shaughnessy, the first Sons of the American Revolution Visiting Professor at King's College London (King's), gave a public lecture on Feb. 13, 2017, in London. Approximately 150 historians and students attended. Professor O'Shaughnessy spoke about the British leaders profiled in his book, The Men Who Lost America: British Leadership, the Revolutionary War and the Fate of Empire. He also discussed the impact of the Georgian Papers Programme on our understanding of the Atlantic world in the 18th century in general and the American Revolution in particular. The lecture was hosted jointly by the Georgian Papers Programme and the Sir Michael Howard Centre for the History of War at King's College.

Arthur Burns, Vice Dean (Education) of the Faculty of Arts and Humanities, welcomed attendees to the Great Hall on the Strand campus of King's in London's West End. Burns is a professor of modern British history and the academic director of the Georgian Papers Programme. He acknowledged with gratitude the SAR's generosity in sponsoring the SAR Visiting Professorships.

Andrew Lambert, Laughten Professor of Naval History at King's, then introduced Professor O'Shaughnessy. In addition to being the first Sons of the American Revolution Visiting Professor at King's, O'Shaughnessy is professor of American history at the University of Virginia, vice president of the Thomas Jefferson Foundation, and Saunders Director of the Robert H. Smith International Center for Jefferson Studies at Monticello. O'Shaughnessy also served as the SAR Distinguished Scholar for the 2015 SAR Annual Conference on the American Revolution.

Professor O'Shaughnessy's wit was on display during the lecture, and his comments on Lord North, in particular, were appreciated by the audience. Lord North was the prime minister during the Revolution and asked King George III for leave to resign on several occasions, but the king would not let him do so. O'Shaughnessy also acknowledged the role of the SAR in the Georgian Papers Programme and commended the organization for its support of academics studying the Revolutionary War era. Following his lecture, he answered several questions from the audience before showing a clip from the Mel Gibson movie, The Patriot, to underscore his points regarding the post-war portrayal of British commanders in American popular culture.

President General (2013-2014) Joseph W. Dooley, chairman of the SAR's King's College London Partnership Committee; Virginia SAR President Michael J. Elston, vice chairman of the committee; and Emily Elston, lst Vice President of the Virginia Society Children of the American Revolution, attended the lecture. The following day, PG Dooley, President Elston and 1st VP Elston enjoyed a private tour of the Royal Archives at Windsor Castle and met with several people involved in scanning and indexing the Georgian Papers. They also had the opportunity to see first-hand some of the Georgian Papers, including a letter to George III written by Prince William Henry (later King William IV) giving his impressions of occupied New York City. The 16-year-old prince was then a lieutenant in the Royal Navy and serving in North America.

The Georgian Papers Programme is a partnership between the Royal Archives and Royal Library and King's College. King's, in turn, has partnered with other organizations in the development of public engagement programming and enhancing digital access. In addition to the SAR, other partners include the Library of Congress, College of William & Mary, Omohundro Institute of Early American History and Culture, and Fred W. Smith National Library for the Study of George Washington at Mount Vernon. The SAR's role, of course, is to support three eight-week visiting professorships at KCL for American professors over a three-year period. The SAR's support may be extended for another two years.

For more information about the program, visit its official website at www. royalcollection.org.uk/georgianpapers or the US and UK academic websites at http://georgianpapers-us.wm.edu and http://georgianpapersprogramme.com. Also, please visit the SAR's webpage on our partnership with King's at www.sar.org/compatriots/committees/kings-college-london-partnership-committee.

Books for Consideration

Benjamin Franklin & the Quaker Murders by John Harmon McElroy is a mystery set in Philadelphia in 1785, featuring Benjamin Franklin as the detective. The investigation into "the Quaker murders" is a story rich in details about Franklin's life and 18th-century Philadelphia, which in 1785 was the world's largest English-speaking city after London.

Franklin has just returned from nine years as America's first ambassador to France and hopes to spend his final years in quiet retirement. But he is soon approached to serve as president of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania under the constitution he helped write. He also learns that a Quaker stonecutter of his acquaintance is suspected of murder.

Jacob Maul has been jailed on suspicion of strangling his housekeeper and sister-in-law, Mrs. Coons, whose corpse, with bruises to the throat, has been found, bound hand and foot and wrapped in canvas, in the cavity of a disused privy on his property. Franklin refuses to believe Maul capable of such violence, but public opinion has condemned Maul because seven years previously, during Franklin's absence abroad, Maul's wife, Mrs. Coons' sister, was found one morning stone-cold dead in his bed, with bruise marks to her throat. In that earlier death, however, Maul's sterling reputation for Quaker peaceableness and the pleading on his behalf by the dead wife's sister (Mrs. Coons) prompted the coroner to return a "Visitation of God" verdict (the 18th-century version of "Cause of Death Unknown"). Franklin makes an altogether different interpretation of the circumstantial evidence and deduces that Maul is innocent.

Because of Franklin's advanced age and state of health, he recruits the grandson of a former confidant, a veteran of the recently concluded American Revolution, to be his legman. But first he must persuade Capt. James Jamison that Maul is innocent of murder because Jamison agrees with the public's opinion.

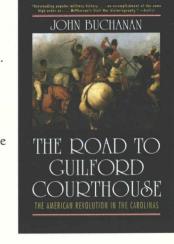

Collecting facts for Franklin to analyze requires Jamison to visit Maul's son, William, and his wife; former members of the Maul household; a washerwoman who occasionally worked for the family; a cousin of Mrs. Coons who keeps a vegetable stand in Philadelphia's market house; and Maul himself, in the squalid confines of the Walnut Street Jail. Other relatives and acquaintances of the dead housekeeper are tracked to a lonely farm outside German Town and to the village of Hopewell and the college town of Princeton on the New Jersey side of the Delaware River. Jamison's legwork turns up evidence that leads Franklin to deduce that the Quaker housekeeper was pregnant when she was killed.

Compatriot McElroy was born and raised in a small glass-manufacturing town on the Allegheny River in Pennsylvania, where his family's roots stretch back to the 18th century. He is a professor emeritus of American literature, who has twice been a Fulbright Professor of American Studies and held faculty appointments at Clemson University, the University of Wisconsin, and the University of Arizona. Besides presenting papers before the American studies associations of Argentina, Brazil and France, he has lectured in Colombia, Poland, Spain, Switzerland and Tunisia and has authored four books on American cultural history. His undergraduate and doctorate degrees are from Princeton and Duke. At Arizona, he created a course on the Literature of the Early Republic that included The Autobiography of Benjamin Franklin, and is the founding host of a radio series on American culture and history (America's Fabric), which is broadcast over Tucson's KVOI-AM.

The Road to Guilford Courthouse: The American Revolution in the Carolinas opens with the 1776 Battle of Sullivan's Island, where Patriot forces successfully defended the Charleston Harbor, and concludes with the British victory at the Battle of Guilford Courthouse in 1781. While these two events bookend this military history, the meat of the work is a battle-by-battle march through the skirmishes and battles of the Southern Campaign, culminating at Guilford Courthouse. The author, John Buchanan, examines not only the battlefield strategy and tactical decisions made in the Carolina backcountry, but also the personalities and military careers of the major characters of Daniel Morgan, Nathanael Greene, Francis Marion, Sir Henry Clinton, Lord Cornwallis and Banastre Tarleton.

Founding Father Alexander Hamilton is all the rage, especially with the ongoing Broadway hit musical, but now a new business book asks, "What else can we learn from the feisty Federalist?"

In The Leadership Secrets of Hamilton: 7 Steps to Revolutionary Leadership from Alexander Hamilton and the Founding Fathers, author Gordon Leidner focuses on transformation—a key leadership principle that guided America through the Revolution—and how it and other Hamilton traits can lead to success for modern-day leaders as well. "Following in Hamilton and other forefathers' footsteps in motivating employees to go behind their self-interests for bigger goals" is crucial, writes Leidner. Leaders must not only clearly convey a vision, but they must also be a mentor and respect the people they lead in order to get them to aim higher.

Published by Sourcebooks, Leadership Secrets of Hamilton (ISBN: 978-1-4926-4952-6) sells for $15.95.

Leidner is the author of numerous books and articles about Abraham Lincoln and the Civil War. He is a board member of the Abraham Lincoln Institute.

ALABAMA SOCIETY

General Galvez Chapter

The Gen. Galvez Chapter met at Felix's Fish Camp Restaurant on the Causeway on Oct. 13, 2016 for its monthly meeting and lunch.

The speaker was Compatriot David W. Myers of Gulf Shores, who has an impressive list of organizations of which he is a member—82nd Airborne Division, Military Order of the Stars and Bars, Sons of Confederate Veterans and All About Dogs Coastal Rescue, to name a few.

His presentation was on his fourth great-grandfather, John Pleasants Burton, a veteran of the 9th Virginia Regiment of Foot and a participant in the Battles of Brandywine and Germantown. It is documented that John Pleasants Burton said, "Like in life, even in death, the Burtons will hold their heads up." In David's program we learned how this statement became a large part of the Burton legacy and remains true.

Montgomery Chapter

In conjunction with the Martha Wayles Jefferson Chapter, DAR, the Montgomery Chapter collects used clothing and donates it to veterans in need at the Tuskegee Veterans Affairs Hospital. The Osher Lifelong Learning Institute at Auburn University assisted in collecting items for this year's Christmas donations.

Compatriot Walter Dorsey, a World War II Navy veteran, served as the SAR chapter's chairman.

Three large pickup truck loads of clothing were collected and delivered. Assisting the Christmas collection effort were Greg Holston, president of the Montgomery Chapter; SAR Junior members Sam and Mitch Flenniken; and C.A.R. member Lillie Flenniken. Sam, Mitch and Lillie Flenniken are the children of DAR member Shellie Flenniken of Opelika and grandchildren of DAR member Ann Mitchell, also of Opelika.

Tennessee Valley Chapter

On Dec. 10, 2016, the Tennessee Valley Chapter Color Guard had the distinct honor to present the colors at the annual Wreaths for Veterans ceremony in Maple Hill Cemetery. The Wreaths for Veterans organization is a Madison County, Alabama, affiliate of Wreaths Across America.

This organization is nonprofit and was formed nine years ago by the members of the Redstone Garden Club. After seeing an article on Wreaths Across America, the women decided to form an organization to lay wreaths for deceased veterans in Madison County. This year, the Wreaths for Veterans organization placed approximately 3,400 wreaths at Maple Hill Cemetery and at Valhalla Memory Gardens in Madison County.

A special thanks to Colin Wakefield and Bill Massey of the Tennessee Society SAR for joining us in the color guard and to Tennessee Valley Chapter member Donald Christian for taking the photographs.

ARIZONA SOCIETY

The Arizona Society SAR partnered with the C.A.R. and DAR to present eight programs during Constitution Week at two schools, the Heritage Academy Gateway Campus in Queen Creek, Arizona, on Sept. 12, 2016; and Canyon Ridge School in Surprise on Sept. 16.

Eight compatriots re-enacted the program, which covered the Declaration of the Independence, Battle of Yorktown, 1783 Treaty of Paris, Shays Rebellion, Annapolis Convention, Constitutional Convention, Federalist Papers, Anti-Federalist Papers, Anti-Federalist Papers, Anti-Federalism and the U.S. Constitution. Presenters were Wayne Hood as Nathaniel Hood, his ancestor; Matt Scott as Patrick Henry and Daniel Shay; Dr. Bill Baran as Samuel Adams; Ed Steinback III as George Claybourne, his ancestor; Jan Huber speaking on the Constitutional Convention; Allen Nash as James Madison; Steve Miller as Philip Woodring, his ancestor; and Steve Monez as George Washington and narrator. More than 500 students attended and pocket Constitutions were available to each at the end.

While the re-enactment was taking place, Lezlee Alexander, AZ DAR and C.A.R. honorary state president, accompanied by Barbara Cook, AZ DAR American history chair, and Elizabeth Wiegelt, DAR White Tank Mountain member, held seminars in the classrooms sharing the many programs offered by SAR, DAR and C.A.R. They handed out brochures and answered questions so students could see the opportunities available to them.

The chapters received many thank-you cards from the students. Christopher Raso, the history teacher responsible for setting up the program at Canyon Ridge, said his students were still talking about the re-enactment weeks later.

Kami Tietjen, the parent-teacher who arranged the program at Heritage Academy, said the children in the classroom appreciated the information they received.

President General J. Michael Tomme Sr. and his wife, Cilla, were the special guests of the Arizona Society Board of Management Meeting on Nov. 12, 2016 at the Hilton Phoenix/Chandler Hotel. The President General spoke at the board meeting and later, after an introduction bio by Arizona SAR President Stephen J. Miller, to the banquet attendees. Numerous awards and certificates of recognition were given at the board meeting and banquet.

Children of the American Revolution President Gillian Alexander also spoke at the banquet.

The Arizona SAR Color Guard presented colors on Nov. II at the Pebble Creek Resort Community Salute to Our Veterans celebration. Vice President Steve Monez spoke on George Washington's address to the Continental Congress in 1771.

Miller and Color Guard Commander Matt Scott presented a wreath during the 75th anniversary of the attack on Pearl Harbor at a memorial service for those who perished in the sinking of the USS Arizona.

Tucson Chapter

The cremated remains of 27 veterans were honored by the Tucson Chapter Color Guard and veterans groups in a solemn outdoor ceremony at the New Marana Veterans Cemetery. The Oct. 15, 2016, Missing in America Project event was just one of many such ceremonies conducted throughout the year at veterans cemeteries nationwide. The color guard formed twin columns for members of the different services to pass through with the departed veteran's remains. After an opening ceremony, the remains were escorted to the columbarium for interment. Following interment, the color guard fired a musket salute. Tucson chapter members attending were John Bird, Jim Bly, Rudy Byrd, Gerry Lawford, John Lyons and Albert Niemeyer, complemented by AZ SAR President Steve Miller and Ladies Auxiliary member Sandra Lawford.

In that capacity, Miller has become one of the leading advocates for our country's military veterans. While the issues and scandals at the VA became a hotbutton political issue, Miller staved focused on service to our veterans. Chapter President and FLSSAR NW Region Vice President Chris Washler presented Miller with the certificate and medal to recognize his outstanding service to our country's veterans.

Members attending the National Congress brought back awards for the chapter as well as some great memories to share. The Kansas SAR Color Guard marched in the nation's oldest Veterans Day observance Nov. 11, 2016 in historic Leavenworth. The patriotic public paid tribute to veterans and their sacrifices in the event that draws 12,000 to 15,000 spectators annually, from as far away as Oklahoma, Nebraska, Missouri, Iowa, Colorado and Minnesota.

The first Armistice Day was clear and perfect for a celebration. Every year since, the day has been fittingly observed with a parade.

The Leavenworth Times first received word of Allies and Central Powers signing the Armistice at 4 a.m., Nov. 11, 1918. Instantly, a bedlam of whistles, bells and shots rang out in Leavenworth and the wildest celebration the city ever has known was underway. Leavenworth Mayor John C. Seitz declared a holiday as soon as he received word of the Armistice and by noon every business in the city was closed and all employees were parading in the streets, shouting, blowing horns, screaming, throwing confetti and otherwise giving vent to the emotion brought on by word of "world peace."

"Leavenworth went wild. Following the flash of glorious peace news and victory to Allied arms that arrived early vesterday morning, crowds of screaming, noise making, confetti-throwing, and gloriously happy people representing all ages from small children to gray-haired men and aged women, thronged the downtown streets from early in the morning until midnight. Never before in the history of the town has such a celebration been held, for everyone was thinking of a son, brother or other relative 'over there' whose task was finished and soon would be starting back," the newspaper reported.

President Woodrow W. Wilson's proclamation stated: "The armistice was signed this morning. Everything which America has fought for has been accomplished. It will now be our fortunate duty to assist by sober, friendly counsel and by material aid in the establishment of democracy throughout the world."

On Nov. 15, 2016, the Mississippi State Archives placed on display at the Olive Branch (Mississippi) Library the 20-star American flag that was the official United States flag from April 4, 1818 to July 4, 1819. The flag in the MDAH collection originally came from the Weston home in Marshfield, Massachusetts, and evidence indicates Capt. Weston may have flown the flag from one of his ships. The Mississippi Department of Archives and History acquired the flag from a Michigan man who purchased it from a Massachusetts dealer. The flag flew for only one year. This display celebrates the forthcoming bicentennial of the State of Mississippi and honors the state's history. The flag will be displayed in 13 Mississippi cities over the next several months. The 20-star flag will be on permanent display in the new Museum of Mississippi History when it opens in Jackson, Mississippi, on Dec. 9, 2017. Gold Star Mothers Honor and Remember the Fallen

"The groves of trees sway in the wind, like soldiers standing guard over memories."

On Sept. 25, 2008, Rebecca Frank, now president of the Ohio Department of Gold Star Mothers, lost her son, Capt. Warren Frank, in Iraq, earning her the bittersweet-buthonorary title as a Gold Star Mother. Frank, donned in traditional white garb, spoke the words quoted above during Gold Star Mothers Day at the Mohican Memorial Shrine, where many gathered to honor soldiers living and dead.

The day was first set apart by President Franklin D. Roosevelt on June 23, 1936, when a congressional resolution was passed that designated the last Sunday of September as National Gold Star Mothers Day.

In 1947, the Mohican Memorial Shrine was dedicated, and since then, the "great books" have been updated with names of all the fallen soldiers from Ohio. Several folders stored in the shrine contain the names of the beloved men and women who have died serving the country.

"Last year, we had to add seven names to the list," said Chairperson of the Memorial Shrine Trustees Stephanie Rouse, adding that the books are taken out only once a year—on National Gold Star Mothers Day.

"But I'm proud to say that we did not have to add any new names to the list this year," Rouse reported to the applauding crowd.

According to Assistant Chief of the Ohio Department of Natural Resources David Lane, the shrine is open 365 days a year. The department's Division of Forestry maintains its grounds.

"The shrine serves as a living memory to honor the men and women lost in war," Lane said.

He offered his thanks to those who served in World War II, Vietnam, Iraq and Afghanistan, and to all those who are serving currently.

Among the crowd were veterans, current service men and women, and Blue Star families and mothers. A Blue Star mother is a mother whose son or daughter is currently serving in the military, explained Buckeye Military Moms Chairperson Lynn Feldman.

To conclude the ceremony, Frank and President of the Ohio Federation of Women's Clubs Lisa Hedrick placed wreaths at the base of the flagpole that stands in front of the shrine. There was also a flag-folding ceremony, and former U.S. Army Band members Dan Carey and Steve Seckman played Taps on their bugles.

TENNESSEE SOCIETY

The Gathering at Sycamore Shoals was held Sept. 17, 2016 to celebrate the 236th anniversary of the muster of the Overmountain Men, who began their march to the battle of Kings Mountain from Fort Watauga in present-day Elizabethton, Tennessee.

TN SAR Acting Commander John Clines led the color guard of compatriots from Tennessee, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Kentucky and Ohio, along with members of the Overmountain Trail Association. Special guests included Southern District Vice President General Gerald Brent and NSSAR Treasurer General Warren Alter.

The Tennessee SAR Color Guard stood on the steps of the state Capitol for the Constitution Day Bell Ringing Ceremony. Participating were Tennessee SAR Acting Commander John Clines with guardsmen David Eagan, Donald Horton, Jim McKinney, Johnny Head, George Miller, Sanford Peyton and Rick Langton.

Benjamin Cleveland Chapter

The Benjamin Cleveland Chapter hosted two grave markings on Oct. 22, 2016. The first was at the Garrison Cemetery in Dayton, Tennessee, honoring Col. Return Jonathan Meigs, who served in the 6th Connecticut Infantry, commanded by Gen. Anthony Wayne. He also served under Gen. Benedict Arnold in the failed assault on Quebec, where Meigs was captured by the British but was exchanged the following year. In May 1777, at the head of 170 men, he attacked the British troops at Sag Harbor, Long Island, New York, taking 90 prisoners, and destroying 12 vessels and much forage without the loss of a single man. For this brilliant exploit, Congress voted him thanks and presented him a sword.

The TN SAR Color Guard commanded by Acting Commander John Clines served this grave marking in the morning and then traveled to the second grave marking in the afternoon.

The TN SAR Color Guard marched into the David Campbell Memorial Park in Dayton to honor Major David Campbell, who served as major in the Virginia Militia under the command of Gen. Nathanael Greene.

Campbell was appointed major in the fall of 1780 in the Botetourt County, Virginia militia serving under Greene. During the same year, he qualified as a practicing attorney in Washington County, Virginia, and spent his time either fighting in the Revolutionary War or battling in the courtroom.

Musket volleys honored the patriots at both events.

Franklin Chapter

Sixteen members of the Tennessee SAR had the honor of leading the City of Franklin's Veterans Day Parade Nov. 11, 2016. Hosted by the Andrew Crockett Chapter, the Tennessee SAR Color Guard turned out in force on a sunny fall day. Color guard members included Commander John Clines, State President David Eagan, Mark Cox, Sanford Payton, James Stone, Roger Tenney, Allen Poteet, Johnny Head, Jim McKinney, Jim Johnson, Steve Gaines, John Clark, Colin Wakefield, Ed Phillips, Dusty Clines and Bob Hughes, dressed as Benjamin Franklin.

George Washington Chapter

The George Washington Chapter celebrated its 55th wreath-laying at George Washington's tomb on the Mount Vernon, Virginia, estate July 4, 2016. Despite the threat of rain, there was a banner turnout of 49 SAR members. After hearing the inspiring oration from the Joseph A. Rumbaugh VA

SAR winner Alexandra Rodriguez, Light Horse Harry Lee Society, C.A.R. President Alexandra Salley led the Pledge of Allegiance. The group then proceeded to Washington's tomb, led by the Fife and Drums of Prince William the Third and the VA SAR Color Guard. There, VA SAR President Ed Truslow and Chapter President Greg Bodge placed a wreath on Washington's tomb. Then, SAR members and guests were invited to lay a red carnation at the tomb's entrance.

Immediately afterward, Chapter Vice President Paul Walden led the Pledge of Allegiance as part of Mount Vernon's annual naturalization ceremony on Mount Vernon's front lawn. At this event, 100 people, representing 45 nations, became U.S. citizens. In all, it was a perfect tribute to the Father of our Country on the 240th anniversary of our nation's founding.

Joseph Greer Chapter

The Joseph Greer Chapter hosted a grave-marking ceremony Oct. 29, 2016, for Patriot Capt. John Medearis at the Medearis Family Cemetery near Petersburg, Tennessee. NSSAR Southern District Color Guard Commander Colin Wakefield reviewed the Color Guard led by Tennessee SAR Acting Commander John Clines. The color guard was made up of compatriots from Tennessee, Alabama and Kentucky, along with four cannons.

Patriot Medearis enlisted in the Revolutionary Army, North Carolina Continental Line. He was commissioned first lieutenant in 3rd NC on April 15, 1777, Eaton's Company. He was promoted to captain on Dec. 23, 1777 in charge of the Medearis Regiment, and promoted to brevet major on Sept. 30, 1783. He contributed much to the war effort and was instrumental in obtaining supplies for Gen. George Washington's Army during the harsh winter on the Potomac. Pensions and payment for services were issued in land grants to officers, based on their time of service and rank. Capt. Medearis obtained a large tract of land in Tennessee on which he retired after the Revolution. He called this plot of land "Liberty," and there is a state historical marker near where the old home site still stands.

Kings Mountain Chapter

The Kings Mountain Chapter hosted a grave marking for three Revolutionary War Soldiers—Pvt. Seth Babb, Cpl.

Joseph Hawkins and Lt. Henricus Stonecypher—in the Babb Family Cemetery Oct. 15, 2016.

Chapter members and family members cleaned and restored damaged headstones and cleared the cemetery of overgrowth. Compatriots Ben and Ricky Stonecypher, descendants of Lt. Henricus Stonecypher, served as the color guard to honor their Patriot ancestor. The event received front-page coverage in The Greeneville Sun.

Informational markers were placed on each grave to preserve the legacy of the Patriots' service.

TN SAR Acting Commander John Clines led the combined color guard to the memorial grave markings of Teter Nave and Leonard Bowers at the Old Nave Cemetery in the Siam Valley near Elizabethton, Tennessee. The color guard was made up of compatriots from Tennessee, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Ohio and Kentucky.

The event was hosted by the Watauga Chapter and District 1 Director Ronnie Lail. Special guest speakers included TN SAR President David Eagan, NSSAR Southern District VP Gen. Gerald Brent and NSSAR Treasurer Gen. Warren Alter.

Teter Nave served as a volunteer with the Overmountain Men under Col. Isaac Shelby in the Battle of Kings Mountain.

Leonard Bowers also served with the Overmountain Men under Col. Shelby. Bowers married Teter Nave's daughter.

In 1994, he was named outstanding alumnus of the Institute of Genealogical and Historical Research. He received the Filby Prize for genealogical librarianship in 1999, and in 2003, he received the Northeast Texas Library Systems Lifetime Achievement Award. He also served as Librarian General of the National Society SAR.

Others selected included Lynn Forney Young, immediate past President General of the National Society DAR; Nancy Bennett, former president of the Texas Genealogical Society; and DeEtte Nesbitt of Houston, who helped organize the Heritage Societies of the United States.

Each of the winners also was presented the Bexar County "Hidalgo Award." San Antonio Mayor Ivy Taylor issued a proclamation honoring each of the winners.

Asa and Ty Whatley were awarded the Sons of the American Revolution Good Citizenship Award by the Bernardo de Galvez Chapter, below. They were selected to receive the award for activities serving numerous communities in southeast Texas over the past six years. They served these communities with the Cub Scouts, Webelos, Boy Scouts, SAR, The Mainstream Connection and Gloria Dei Lutheran Church. They are believed to be the youngest recipients of this award from the chapter, which was founded in 1896. They are also members of Bernardo de Galvez Chapter. Their grandfather, past president Bill Whatley, made the presentation.

Patrick Henry Chapter

On Oct. 14-16, 2016, the Patrick Henry Chapter hosted the Texas SAR Board of Managers meeting in Austin, Texas. The Texas SAR was honored to have Secretary General Larry Guzy in attendance. Plano Chapter

Members of the Plano Chapter posted and retrieved the Colors at a Naturalization ceremony held on Dec. 2, 2016 at the Immigration and Naturalization Service Field Offices in Irving, Texas.

San Antonio Chapter

For the past six years, Judge Ed Butler has spoken to the student body and guests of Aue Elementary School (K-5) in San Antonio. The auditorium was filled with parents and family, many of whom were wearing military uniforms, for his most recent program, which was shown live on video through all the classrooms. His granddaughter sang in the choir. The choir sang several patriotic songs, and then sang a series of songs of each branch of the service. Those in the audience were asked to stand when their branch of the service was being sung.

In past years, Butler has worn the uniform of George Washington. This year, he wore the uniform of the Culpeper, Virginia, Minuteman. His granddaughter, Kennedy Ivory, held the Culpeper Minuteman Flag. He explained to the students that when the minutemen left the farmhouse for the fields they took with them their muskets, musket balls and powder horn, filled with gunpowder. In that manner, when trouble arose, they could be ready to fight "in a minute." The audience then gave a rousing applause for those brave PG Butler, with sword drawn, then led the parade through the hallways lined with students, parents, Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts. Many waved U.S. flags and cheered. The drummer and fifer were provided by the Granaderos de Galvez.

UTAH SOCIETY

Many Ogden City residents gathered on the sidewalks along the Nov. 12, 2016 Veterans Day parade route to honor and show gratitude for the numerous participating entries. Among these were members of the Utah SAR Color Guard. Marching with them were cadets of the Utah Military Academy's (UMA) American Revolution Patriots 4-H Club. This club was conceived and developed by Utah SAR Compatriots Lyle Gingery, Gregg Hansen and Doug McGregor. They, along with others of the Utah SAR, desire to membership participation and attendance at SAR events.

instill patriotism and a deep understanding of the principles of liberty and freedom within our youth. Currently 13 duespaying cadets are club members.

UMA has been supportive and expressed a desire to have a Revolutionary War color guard, which has become the primary focus of the club. At each weekly meeting, club members recite the Pledge of Allegiance and the 4-H pledge, and spend time discussing a patriotic educational lesson from the American Revolution or the Constitutional Convention of 1787. Club members spend the remainder of the time learning Barron Von Steuben's commands and the proper use of flintlocks for marching in parades and performing in patriotic programs. The three Utah SAR adult club advisors have completed the BSA youth protection course.

Utah SAR President Douglas McGregor and Color Guard Compatriot Gary England provided a Bronze Good Citizenship medal ceremony on Dec. 3, 2016 for Cadet Chief Emalee Hughes of the Utah Jake Garn Squadron Sea Cadets. Chief Hughes met Compatriot England at the back of the room and marched "in the footsteps" of the Patriots of the American Revolution to the podium. President McGregor shared a story of the Battle of Trenton—telling of Washington's leadership and courage. Courtney Putnam gave the award citation praising Hughes for her accomplishments. McGregor offered his congratulations and pinned on the medal. England led Hughes to the back of the room. The Utah SAR supports two Sea Cadet Squadrons in Utah and provides the Bronze Good Citizenship Medal to deserving

With 16 applications currently in the queue at NSSAR, the CWG chapter expects membership to soon exceed 200.

Success has come from outstanding leadership, aggressive recruiting at community events, outreach, fundraising, strong

WASHINGTON SOCIETY

The Washington SAR-DAR Color Guard had 30 marchers from three DAR chapters and two SAR chapters in the small town of Steilacoom, Washington's 2016 Fourth of July Parade. In all there were 130 units, 70 craft and food tents and 15,000 onlookers at the celebration of the 240th birthday of the United States.

Columbia Basin Chapter

Barry Moravek, Kelly Schultz and Larry Flint attended and manned a chapter booth at the Oct. 22, 2016 Hermiston Family Discovery Days. This event also was attended by Karen Schultz of the Kennewick DAR and Art Kelly of the Tri-City Genealogical Society. It was a great day that included a coloring contest, where the chapter awarded pieces-of-eight sets. Compatriot Flint also gave a living history talk to a group of youngsters.

John Paul Jones Chapter

Eight members of the John Paul Jones Chapter in Bremerton, Washington, participated in the Dec. 17, 2016 Wreaths Across America ceremony at Ivy Green Cemetery, where more than 500 veterans graves are located. The chapter provided the honor guard and several members who placed wreaths, always speaking the name of the veteran as part of the ceremony. At the conclusion, compatriots placed memorial wreaths at five other smaller cemeteries in the area in memory of the veterans.

Nationally, more than 1.2 million wreaths were placed at 1,200 cemeteries. The John Paul Jones Chapter, spearheaded by the Chapter WAA Chairman Mike Hersey, placed more than 600 wreaths in Kitsap County, Washington.

Some 1,000 high school students gathered Thursday, Nov. 10, 2016 in the Central Kitsap High School gymnasium to honor veterans and sing "America the Beautiful." Honored guests were veterans of the John Paul Jones Chapter, SAR, each of whom received a long-stemmed flower for their service. It isn't often that Revolutionary War soldiers travel "through time" to visit a local high school.

Afterward, in the school auditorium, the students heard a "first person" account of a soldier's life during the Revolutionary War. Chapter President Conrad Plyler introduced the three soldiers and talked about the SAR and its mission and objectives, before introducing the time travelers. Fred Gilbert wore the Revolutionary War uniform of a sergeant and talked about the militia, minutemen and Continental soldiers. Bob Smalser appeared as a frontier rifleman. He talked about frontier militia, self-sufficiency, the differences between frontier and continental soldiers, and differences between a musket and rifle. Washington SAR President Doug Nelson, dressed in a Revolutionary War uniform of Col. Henry Knox's Regiment of Artillery, gave a summary of our young nation in 1776 and its diversity.

The next day, the students were asked if they wanted the Revolutionary War soldiers to return next year and they resoundingly said, "yes." The high school then offered the John Paul Jones Chapter space in a display case to show students Colonial items from the Revolutionary War period.

WISCONSIN SOCIETY

Near the east shore of Lake Winnebago, on a hill known as the Stockbridge Old Indian Cemetery, the Wisconsin SAR unveiled a historical marker. More than 100 people basked in the early fall sunshine while several veterans groups honored the memory of Bartholomew Scott Calvin, scout and interpreter for the Continental Army.

Calvin was born in New Jersey, a full-blooded Delaware Indian. He left his studies at Princeton College to serve with several Continental units from Pennsylvania. After Revolutionary service, Calvin returned to New Jersey to be a schoolmaster. When the Delaware were invited to join the Mohicans in a move to western New York, he was the tribal leader. Calvin led his people there and then to Wisconsin. He was an outstanding scholar, soldier, teacher and tribal Ceremonies featured Puzzle Hill Singers, a Native American group, which sang an entrance song and the warrior song in native tongue. Native drummers performed twice and the Honor Flute Song was played.

An eight-man color guard from the Wisconsin SAR performed a "solemn salute," an elaborate "pass in review" led by Brian Barrett at the marble marker near Calvin's burial place. As the color guard returned to ranks, a large WI SAR bell pealed 13 times. SAR members were followed by members of the nearby American Legion posts' color guards. Past WI SAR President and VPG Russ Buhr was the master of ceremonies. Steve Michaels represented the SAR in the removal of the marker's covering. SAR member Kim Heltemes was the chief ceremony organizer and liaison with the tribal communities; Heltemes also played Taps after the rifle squad salute.

Bartholomew Calvin was the 43rd Patriot identified and honored with a historical marker in Wisconsin. Contributions to the WI SAR for the marker also came from Daughters of the American Revolution, Col. Benjamin Harrison Chapter of Monroe, Wisconsin, and the Oneida and Mohican Tribal Councils.

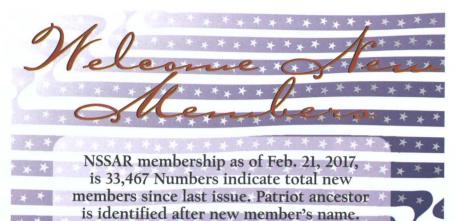

WEST VIRGINIA SOCIETY

Point Pleasant Chapter

On Oct. 9, 2016, the Point Pleasant Chapter of the West Virginia Society hosted the Battle of Point Pleasant Memorial Service on the site of the Battle of Point Pleasant that occurred Oct. 10, 1774 between the Virginia militia and members of the Shawnee and Mingo tribes.

Members of the Sons of the American Revolution, Daughters of the American Revolution, Children of the American Revolution, Boy Scouts of America, city officials and others annually gather at the Tu-Endie-Wie State Park, now at the location of the battlefield, to pay tribute to the 81 militia members who were killed during the one-day battle. They place wreaths at the granite stone marking the powder magazine of the militia fortifications.

Representing the President General of the SAR at this year's event was Vice President General of the Central District Thomas Payne of the Kentucky Society.
